

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An object shell console attaches to an executing computer application. The object shell console extracts information from the executing application without interrupting or terminating the executing application. The information is displayed to a user on a graphical user interface. The user can choose to have more detailed information about the executing application displayed by request, if such information exists.

1159604